In Memoriam

In Memory of E. W. [Pete] Martin:

Come this joyous season when all dear ones are near
We find this one chair that's just not filled.
As we gather 'round the table and see your chair bare,
We look up to see, and you do not appear.

We will stop and wait, then go on to grace
We will find you not so far away,
When we ask God to bless our day.
It will be quite different with you away
But believe you me, your thoughts within our hearts, Will be deep within our way.

So as our season goes on, and drums near a close
We want you to know that our thoughts of you do not grow cold.
We will be as near to you, as if you were still here
So please don't you go too far away.
YOU JUST REMEMBER US.
WE MISS YOU,
Dad, Mom, & Sisters.

BRUSHING UP ON HAIR CARE

It is time to challenge one of the oldest myths. This myth--passed on from grandmother, no doubt, was that to have healthy, shining hair it was essential to brush vigorously at least 100 strokes every day. How wrong Granny was! That was yesteryear, and as the saying goes, we've come a long way, baby! A long way to realizing that overzealous combing and brushing can represent a major cause of hair damage.

So say the experts. Among them Dr. Karl Laden, who is known in the field of cosmetic science, and Clairol's research scientists who use a scanning electron microscope to measure hair damage and its causes.

"Once the hair has grown out from the scalp it is like any other inanimate material," Dr. Laden said, "and can only take a certain amount of rubbing, stretching, bending, pulling, twisting, teasing, straightening, etc., before some amount of physical damage occurs. Furthermore, when you consider that the ends of your hair can be on your head for three to five years, depending on your hair length, one realizes just how much physical abuse it must withstand."

Experts feel excessive combing and brushing can split the hair--not at the ends--but along the middle of the hair fiber. These splits result from the high forces being exerted on the hair as it is being pulled through the teeth of the comb. When this happens, small cracks or separations develop and as the hair grows out they become split ends. The longer the hair the greater the pull on the hair--resulting in the "frizzies."

Creme rinses, like Clairol's herbal essence creme rinse, lubricate the hair shaft by ensuring the comb glides through the hair smoothly--not eradicating a problem which has already been created but helping to minimize it.

While we're on the subject of do's and don'ts, do wash your hair as often as is needed. Just use the proper kind of shampoo. Don't ever go to bed in rollers. That's another good way to break and split the hair. Don't wash, pull, or twist your hair in a towel...pat it dry. Do rinse hair thoroughly and follow with a cool water rinse. And treat yourself to a brush which has rounded, unsharp bristles.

When you brush and comb, my lady, remember to be gentle. Brush your hair by bending over and brushing from the nape of the neck forward. Then standing erect, flip hair back to its formal position and lightly comb or brush from underneath into its style. Comb gently after shampoo and creme rinse. Let the rinse do all the work.

Remember, if your hair could talk it might be asking for your help. It just may not know that it isn't alive. Let's not tell it by abusing and neglecting it.

POLLUTION DELAY

The Environmental Protection Agency has allowed the nation's auto makers to delay from 1976 to 1977 the production of cars that would meet stringent emission standards for nitrogen oxides.

UNICORN TAPESTRY

Many tapestries of the 15th and 16th centuries portrayed secular themes as well as religious ones. Court and hunting scenes were popular, as in the famous "Hunt of the Unicorn," now in The Cloisters, New York.
